

Autism Practitioners

Our Autism Practitioners have several years of experience of working with autistic people and their families. Their role is provided more practical hands-on approach to their support, for example they might come to your home and support you to embed a recommendation made by the clinical team.

They are particularly skilled in working with individuals and families that have challenges around executive functioning. Executive functioning needs are often accompanied by lots of frustrations and negative emotions, however developing understanding of the steps that are often required to complete what is perceived as straight forward tasks can help us in understanding how to 'unclog the traffic jam' (Chris Memmott, Autistic Advocate)
